HISTORY OF THE FRANKLIN KIWANIS FRANKLIN-STERLING MINERAL EXHIBIT

In 1957 the Board of Directors of the Franklin Kiwanis Club, after extensive deliberation, authorized a mineral show as an official fund raising project. Permission was obtained to use the Neighborhood House and the Boro Council further approved the operation of the Buckwheat Mineral Dump by the Kiwanis Club for the two days of the show. Members canvassed the townspeople for old dining room china cabinets and any other furniture suitable for the display of minerals. Local mineral collectors were asked to display their prize possessions. The lack of knowledge on how to conduct a mineral show was offset by the enthusiasm of the club members and townspeople. Even a light snowstorm on the final day of the show failed to dampen the spirits. The show was pronounced a great success by all who participated, and the club immediately decided that it should become an annual affair. At this point it was all too evident that standardized display cases would be a necessity for any future shows. A Committee was set up to work on this project. After much discussion a simple but adequate design was evolved and as the date of the second show drew near, club members met in a basement workshop and mass produced plywood parts for two dozen cases. These were assembled, glass covers attached, fluorescent fixtures installed, and on the eve of the second annual show a coat of stain was applied. The excellence of design and construction are attested to by the more than twelve years these cases have been in use. The second show drew a larger crowd than the first, but due to the cost of materials for the cases, the profit was small.

The Exhibit became too large for the Neighborhood House and in 1959 it was decided that the Franklin Armory was the most suitable location and appropriate arrangements were made.

Also, in 1959 the Replica Mine was erected at its present location with enlargements and improvements being made each year. For four successive years the popularity of the show increased.

After the 1963 show, sufficient funds were on hand to undertake the erection of a Mineral Museum. Plans were made, mortgage money obtained and the construction contract was let. Unfortunately, delays in construction prevented the Museum from being completed in time for the 1964 show.

Each year a bigger and better show has had the Armory bursting at its seams and in 1968 the traffic congestion was so bad that plans were made for the 1969 show to have a central parking and free shuttle bus service to the various places included in the exhibit. This feature proved so popular that it is to be expanded on again in 1978.
